It's been brought to my attention the new regulation for Food Truck vendors could relocate my favorite vendors to another area not within walking distance of my place of work. This would make my lunch-time pass-time less convenient and force me to consider bringing my lunch from home or just traveling; by vehicle, somewhere else instead of keeping the revenue from the Food Trucks here in the city. Eventually our DC Food Trucks will have to leave and find other locations willing to accept their business with open arms like Virginia or Maryland. The DC Food Truck scene is making national news growing DC into a place to be, now lets not ruin this exciting new element of DC by implementing these rules. Please find a way to work with them and resolve this issue as soon as possible because in the end you both need each other.
